

Have a Good Day, Friend!

I wish we could sit down together and talk.

...that we could rip off our masks and share as friends.

...that I could tell you that though I can be terribly selfish, I really do care what happens to you.

...and that I could show you I'm not alone in caring. There are hundreds of thousands of others who care too ...and who'll be sharing their caring today.

These caring people are rich ...poor ...educated ...illiterate ...black ...white ...oriental ...Protestant ...Catholic ...European ...African ...Canadian ...American.

...but they care because they're God's people.

They weren't born that way. In fact they'll all tell you they were born separated ...estranged ...from God.

They aren't good. They'll tell you "there is none good."

They aren't even really religious. They have something that makes mere religion insignificant.

They're trusting people ...trusting God's mercy to meet their need. And He has.

They were lonely, and He came to be with them always.

They were frightened, and He gave them His peace.

They sometimes felt hopeless, and He gave them hope.

They worried about living ...and even more about dying ...and He took away their fear.

Give yourself to God. Thank Him for giving Christ Jesus to die that you might have Life. Tell Him you don't deserve Him, but you'll take the love, the forgiving, and the cleansing. Yes, and the making over He offers too.

Take Him now.

You can
